

BRITISH AND COMMONWEALTH CONCERTOS FROM THE NINETEENTH CENTURY TO THE PRESENT

A Discography of CDs & LPs
Prepared by Michael Herman

Composers D-H

BENJAMIN DALE (1885-1943)

Born in London. An accomplished organist since childhood, he entered the Royal Academy of Music at age 15 where he studied composition under Frederick Corder. He had early success as a composer and teacher including an appointment as Professor of Harmony at the Royal Academy of Music. He composed orchestral, chamber, instrumental, vocal and choral works, including a Concertstück (Concert Piece) for Organ and Orchestra (1904).

CHRISTIAN DARNTON (1905-1981)

Born in Leeds. His musical education was extensive including studies with Frederick Corder at the Brighton School of Music, Harold Craxton at the Matthey School, composition with Benjamin Dale and Harry Farjeon at Cambridge and Gordon Jacob at the Royal College of Music, private lessons with Charles

Wood and Cyril Rootham and further studies with Max Butting in Germany. Coming from a wealthy family, he needed no professional employment so he was able to devote himself almost exclusively to composing. His output was prodigious and included most genres from opera to instrumental. Among his orchestral works orchestra there are 4 Symphonies, 2 Piano Concertos, 2 Violin Concertos, Viola Concerto, Suite Concertante for Violin and Orchestra and a Concerto for Orchestra.

FREDERICK DELIUS
(1862-1934)

Born in Bradford, Yorkshire to German parents. His family had not destined him for a musical career but due to the persuasion of Edvard Grieg his father allowed him to attend the Leipzig Conservatory where he was a pupil of Hans Sitt and Carl Reinecke. His true musical education, however, came from his exposure to the music of African-American workers in Florida as well as the influences of Grieg, Wagner and the French impressionists. His Concertos and other pieces in classical forms are not his typical works and he is best known for his nature-inspired short orchestral works. He also wrote operas that have yielded orchestral preludes and intermezzos in his most characteristic style. Sir Thomas Beecham was his great champion both during Delius' lifetime and after his death.

GERALD FINZI
(1901-1956)

Born in London. As a teenager he studied privately with Ernest Farrar and Edward Bairstow and then in his next decade took counterpoint with R.O. Morris. He joined the staff of the Royal Academy of Music but kept this post only for 3 years before relocating to Berkshire where he devoted most of the rest of his life to composing. He was the founder and conductor of the Newbury String Players. His catalogue is made up of choral, vocal and orchestral works that have become very popular in recent years. He is considered one of England's greatest composers of art songs. Other large-scale orchestra works such as a Symphony and Piano Concerto were started but never completed.

JOHN FOULDS
(1880-1939)

Born in Manchester. He learned the piano and cello at a very young age and used these skills to earn a living in theater orchestras before joining the Hallé Orchestra at the age of 20. He held various musical director posts in London before going to India in 1935 where he immersed himself in the study of Indian folk music while still engaged as a conductor. His music has recently emerged from obscurity and he is found to have been a serious composer far ahead of his own time and not just a creator of light music. Much of his extensive catalogue has been lost but his 1st Cello Concerto (1911), a number of still unrecorded orchestral works and a World Requiem are still extant.

STEFANS GROVÉ (1922–2014)

Born in Bethlehem, Orange Free State, South Africa. His musical education began at school and his first compositional efforts date from that time. He eventually trained as a pianist and organist, with the guidance from his mother's brother, D.J. Roode.^[3] As a student he remained an avid reader of musical scores (often without the assistance of accompanying soundtracks) which not only informed his own development as a composer but may also have developed his talent for sight-reading at the piano. He had the opportunity of going to Harvard University where he completed his master's degree. His teachers there included Thurston Dart and Walter Piston. He composed a large body of works ranging from operas to solo instrumental compositions. His other concertante works include Simfonia Concertante (1955), Daarstelling, for Flute, Harpsichord and Strings (1972), Concerto Grosso, for Violin, Cello, Piano and String Orchestra (1974), "Maya," Concerto Grosso for Violin, Piano and String Orchestra (1978) and Concertino for Piano, Trumpet, Marimba, Flute and Strings (2003).

PETER HOPE (b. 1930)

Born in Stockport, Manchester. He studied at the Royal Manchester College of Music where his were Humphrey Procter-Gregg and Maurice Aitchison. While still in school he composed a Trumpet Concerto that was Broadcast by the BBC Northern Symphony Orchestra. He went to work as a copyist and the arranger in the popular music and eventually became one of the finest composers of light orchestral music of his generation seeing continual performances of his works on the BBC. In his later years he turned to more serious though still very accessible compositions such as the works listed below. His best-known orchestral works are Kaleidoscope and the suites "Ring of Kerry" and "Irish Legend."

KEITH HUMBLE
(1927–1995)

Born in Geelong, Victoria. He studied harmony, composition and counterpoint initially at the Melbourne University Conservatorium. A scholarship enabled him to travel to Britain in 1946 to study at the Royal College of Music, London. Here he studied under Howard Ferguson and Paul Steinitz to obtain a Licentiate Diploma, before travelling to Paris on another scholarship to attend the École Normale de Musique, where he studied piano with Madame Bascourret, Alfred Cortot's assistant. Humble was accepted as a private composition student by René Leibowitz, who introduced him to the concept of serialism. After he returned to Australia, he was appointed Foundation Professor at La Trobe University. His commissions range over various genres, with a strong emphasis on chamber and solo instrumental works.
