WOLDEMAR BARGIEL
(1824-1897)

Born in Berlin, the half brother of Clara Wieck-Schumann. Clara introduced him to both Robert Schumann and Felix Mendelssohn, and he received his first lessons at home and later with the well-known Berlin teacher of music theory, Siegfried Wilhelm Dehn. With the recommendation of Mendelssohn, Bargiel studied at the Leipzig Conservatory with Ignaz Moscheles for piano and Niels Gade and Julius Rietz for composition. After returning to Berlin, he taught music privately. Clara and Robert Schumann helped Bargiel get some of his music published. This led to teaching positions in Cologne, Rotterdam and, eventually, to a distinguished career at Berlin’s Hochschule fur Musik. He composed orchestral, chamber, instrumental and vocal works.

CARL CZERNY
(1791-1857)

Born in Vienna to a musical family of Czech origin. With his father as his first teacher, Czerny, a child prodigy, began playing piano at age three and composing at age seven. His illustrious list of teachers included Ludwig van Beethoven as well as Johann Nepomuk Hummel, Antonio Salieri and Muzio Clementi. He began a very successful teaching career at age fifteen and based his method on the teaching styles of Beethoven and Clementi and his most famous pupil was Franz Liszt. An enormously prolific composer, his catalogue reached Op. 861 and included masses, requiems and a large number of symphonies, concertos, sonatas and string quartets. However, it is only the large number of didactic piano pieces that keep his name alive as a composer. His unrecorded Symphonies are No. 3 in C (before 1854) and the early Symphony, Op. 2 (1806) and Symphony in D (1814). Some sources list additional symphonies.

HANNS EISLER
(1898–1962)

Born in Leipzig. His family moved to Vienna where, after service in World War I, he studied under Arnold Schoenberg. Moving to Berlin, his music became increasingly oriented towards political themes and, to Schoenberg’s dismay, more popular in style with influences drawn from jazz and cabaret. He also began his friendship and collaboration with Bertolt Brecht. The Nazis forced his exile to America where he taught composition at the New School in New York and then worked scoring movies in Hollywood. After World War II, his Communist politics forced him out of the United States and he returned to Germany and settled in East Berlin. Back in East Germany, he composed the national anthem of the German Democratic Republic and became one of that country’s most respected composers and he continued his collaboration with his old friend Bertolt Brecht. He composed an opera, incidental music, orchestral, chamber, vocal and choral works.

WILHELM FURTWÄNGLER
(1886-1954)

Born in Schöneberg (now Berlin-Schöneberg). As a child, he had piano lessons and began to compose. He later studied composition with Anton Beer-Walbrunn and advanced counterpoint with Joseph Rheinberger and completed his studies with Max von Schillings. He soon embarked on a conducting career and performed in Switzerland, Germany and Austria. He became one of the worlds great conductors whose most famous post was at the Berlin Philharmonic. Although his career was tainted as a result of his activities during the Nazi-era, he managed to resume his eminence in the postwar period. He thought of himself primarily as a composer, and, despite his busy conducting career, managed to produce a large amount of orchestral, chamber and instrumental works as well as a pair of early operas and some choral pieces.

He learned his first instrument, the trumpet, at the age of eleven and did not start his formal composition studies until his twenties, when he studied under Diether de la Motte, Günther Friedrichs and Frank Michael Beyer. He then worked for four years in Cologne under Hans Werner Henze. The latter was his major influence and promoter and Glanert worked for him at the Cantiere Internazionale d'Arte in Montepulciano, firstly as assistant co-ordinator and head of the music school. Later on, he was elected academician of the Freie Akademie der Künste Hamburg. He is best known* for his operas but has also composed in various other genres. His Symphony No. 3, Op. 35, was premiered by the BBC in 1996.

KARL (KÁROLY) GÖLDMARK

(1830-1915)

Born in Keszthely, Hungary. His early training as a violinist was at the musical academy of Sopron where he continued his music studies before being sent to Vienna where he was able to study for some eighteen months with Leopold Jansa and then to the Vienna Conservatory to study the violin with Joseph Böhm and harmony with Gottfried Preyer. As a composer, however, he was largely self-taught. He supported himself in Vienna by playing the violin in theatre orchestras, teaching the piano and working as a music journalist. He composed a significant amount of music and his operas brought him a great deal of fame. Besides the operas, he composed orchestral, chamber, instrumental, choral and vocal works. He wrote an earlier Symphony in C (1858–60) whose scherzo has been published.

PAUL GRAENER (1872-1944)

Born in Berlin. He taught himself composition and in 1896 moved to London, where he gave private lessons and served briefly as conductor at the Haymarket Theatre. He later moved to Vienna, where he took a teaching post at the Neues Wiener Konservatorium, and, after moving several more times, accepted the position of professor of composition at the Leipzig University of Music and Theatre. He later resigned this post in order to focus on composition. Returning to Berlin, he directed the Stern Conservatory and then served as professor of composition at the Nazi-controlled Reichsmusikammer. He composed operas, orchestral, chamber and vocal works.

KARL AMADEUS HARTMANN
(1905-1963)
Born in Munich. He studied composition at the Munich Academy with Joseph Haas, a pupil of Max Reger, and later was greatly influenced by the conductor Hermann Scherchen. He voluntarily withdrew completely from musical life in Germany during the Nazi era and refused to allow his works to be played there. During World War II, though already an experienced composer, Hartmann studied privately in Vienna with Anton Webern. After the war, he became a Dramaturg at the Bavarian State Opera and there he became a key figure in the rebuilding of West German musical life. He founded the Musica Viva concert series that reintroduced the German public to 20th-century repertoire that had been banned by the Nazis and also provided a platform for the music of the young composers of the late 1940s and early 1950s. He composed operas, orchestral, chamber, instrumental and vocal works. Music from his earlier Symphonic Concerto for String Orchestra and Soprano (1938) and Symphony Klagegesang (1944) were later reused in his numbered Symphonies.

ROMAN HAUBENSTOCK-RAMATI
(1919-1984)

Born in Krakow, Poland. He studied musicology and philosophy as well as composition with Artur Malawski in Krakow and took private composition lessons with Józef Koffler in Lemberg. After years of exile in the USSR as a result of the Nazis, he returned to head of the music department of the Krakow Radio. He then became director of the State Music Library of Tel Aviv and professor at the Music Academy. Returning to Europe, he worked at the Studio de Musique Concrète in Paris where he drew inspiration from Olivier Messiaen and then worked as editor and music consultant of Universal Edition Vienna. He composed music in many genres ranging from orchestral to solo instrumental and vocal works.

JOSEF MATTHIAS HAUER
(1883-1959)

Born in Wiener Neustadt, Lower Austria. He had an early musical training in zither, cello and choral conducting. These studies did not include theory and composition for he claimed that he was self-taught. He is most famous for developing, independently and a year or two before Arnold Schoenberg, a method for composing with all 12 notes of the chromatic scale. He composed prolifically (577 works) and was also a prolific writer in defense of his musical system. His vast catalogue includes operas, orchestral, chamber, instrumental and vocal works. His other Symphonies are: No. 1 "Nomos" for 1 or 2 Pianos or Orchestra (1911-2) and No. 2 "Nomos" for 2 Pianos or Small Orchestra (1913).

SIEGMUND VON HAUSEGGER
(1872-1948)

Born in Graz. He studied music initially under his father, a prominent music writer and Wagner advocate. His studied the violin and French horn, and attempted to teach himself the organ. He studied score-reading under Erich Degner and advanced keyboard under Karl Pohlig. Initially considered to be an important rising composer, his works were soon forgotten and he became much better known as a prominent conductor. He composed masses, operas and symphonic poems as well as many choruses and songs.

WERNER HEIDER
(b. 1930)

Born in Fürth, Franconia. He first studied with Willy Spilling in Nuremberg and then at the Munich Musikhochschule. He worked at the Bavarian Radio Symphony Orchestra and then embarked on a conducting career introducing many works by colleagues and recording for radio and records. He co-founded the Ars Nova Ensemble Nürnberg and was its conductor and artistic director. He has composed a large catalogue covering many genres from ballets to solo instrumental pieces often with jazz elements in the scores. Among his works is a Symphony No. 2 "Theater Music" (2001-2) and a Sinfonia for 10 Brass Instruments (2000).

(1926-2012)

Born in Gütersloh, Westphalia. His musical education began at the state music school of Braunschweig in 1942, where he studied piano, percussion, and theory. After World War II, he became an accompanist in the Bielefeld City Theatre and then continued his studies under Wolfgang Fortner in Heidelberg. He also took part in the famous Darmstadt New Music Summer School. He became one of West Germany's leading composers but went to live in Italy. He also worked as a conductor and taught master classes in composition at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, and became a visiting Professor at Dartmouth College in New Hampshire. His output as a composer is vast and includes operas, ballets, orchestral, chamber, instrumental, choral and vocal works. His catalogue includes a Vokalsinfonie (based on the opera "König Hirsch") (1955).

JOHANN VON HERBECK

Born in Vienna. He was basically a self-educated musician, but he rose in the music profession from chorister to professor in the Vienna Conservatory. He conducted the concerts of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde and became chief court Kapellmeister and later director of the Imperial Opera. His greatest claim to fame was being the first conductor of Schubert’s "Unfinished" Symphony. He composed orchestral, instrumental and vocal works.

HEINRICH VON HERZOGENBERG
(1843-1900)

Born in Graz. He was studying law, philosophy and political science at the University of Vienna but soon turned his attention to music and attended the composition classes of Felix Otto Dessoff. He founded the Leipzig Bach-Verein, which concerned itself with the revival of Bach’s cantatas and remained its director for a decade and was also professor of composition at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin. He composed orchestral, chamber, instrumental, choral and vocal works. He also composed these 4 earlier Symphonies: in D minor WoO 1 (1866), in ???, in F, WoO 25 and in C minor, WoO 29.

WERNER HEYMANN
(1896-1961)

Born in Königsberg, East Prussia (now Kaliningrad, Russia). He was a child prodigy, starting to sit at the piano at age 3, receiving violin lessons at age 5, and writing his own compositions at age 8. From the age of 13 he studied theory and counterpoint with the conductor and composer Paul Scheinflug, who gave the première of his first major composition in Berlin and his Rhapsodische Symphonie was given its première in 1918 by the Vienna Philharmonic under Felix Weingartner. After World War I he wrote stage music for Berlin, where he became acquainted with the leading exponents of Weimar cabaret and, along with Friedrich Hollaender and Mischa Spoliansky, is credited with creating the classic Weimar cabaret chanson. He then wrote primarily for the stage and screen. Nazism would exile him to Hollywood. After World War II, he returned to SCHMIDT where he continued to write film scores.

PAUL HINDEMITH

Born in Hanau, Hesse. Taught the violin as a child, he entered Frankfurt’s Hoch’sche Konservatorium, where he studied violin with Adolf Rebner, as well as conducting and composition with Arnold Mendelsohn and Bernhard Sekles. His first professional work was as a dance band violinist byt he went on to become leader of the Frankfurt Opera Orchestra and toured as both violinist and violist in the Rebner String Quartet and the Amar Quartet. His own compositions began to be noticed and he began to work as an organizer of the Donaueschingen Festival, where he programmed works by several avant garde composers. He also taught composition at the Berliner Hochschule für Musik. He left Germany during the Nazi period, first to Switzerland, then to a musical post in Turkey and finally to the United States where he taught primarily at Yale University and was the mentor of dozens of America’s finest composers. He eventually returned to Switzerland and taught in Zurich. He is undoubtedly one of the greatest German composers of the 20th century. He composed on an enormous scale covering all genres from opera and ballet to works for solo instruments and voices.

HEINRICH HOFMANN
(1842-1902)

Born in Gross-Tabarz, present-day Thuringia. He studied with Theodor Kullak, Eduard Grell, Siegfried Dehn and Richard Wüerst. Though his Frithjof Symphony was frequently performed in his lifetime, it and all of his other were later forgotten. In addition to orchestral music, he also wrote several operas, some lieder, choral music, and works for solo piano.

ERNST THEODOR AMADEUS HOFFMANN
(1766-1822)

Born in Königsberg, East Prussia (now Kaliningrad, Russia). Best known as a writer of fantastic fiction, he was thoroughly trained in various fields of art and literature. As a child he showed great talent for piano playing, and he was taught counterpoint by a Polish organist named Podbileski. He later held several positions as conductor, critic, and theatrical musical director in Bamberg and Dresden. He composed a considerable amount of music for the stage as well as orchestral and instrumental works. However, his name is kept alive in musical discussions basically as the original author of the story set to music by Tchaikovsky as "the Nutcracker" and as the subject of Offenbach's opera "The Tales of Hoffmann."

ERICH WOLFGANG KORNGOLD
(1897-1957)

Born in Brünn, Moravia (now Brno, Czech Republic). His family moved to Vienna when his father became music critic of the Neue Freie Presse. A musical wunderkind, he began playing the piano and composing at a very early age. His father took him to Gustav Mahler who recommended that he should be taught by the composer Alexander von Zemlinsky. Although he had some lessons with Robert Fuchs and Hermann Grädener among others, Zemlinsky would be Korngold’s only real teacher. He started turning out compositions, including operas that were so polished and mature that many thought they were actually written by his father. He became one of Austria’s leading opera composers, and, with the advent of the Nazi regime sending him to America, one of the greatest of all film composers. He made several return trips to Europe in the post-World War II period for the premieres of some of his work, but died in Hollywood. Although his greatest fame rests on his movie scores, he also produced a significant catalogue of operas, orchestral, chamber, instrumental, choral and vocal... works, many of which have been repeatedly revived since his death. He left the sketches of a Symphony No. 2.
